COACH OF W. U. MAKES HIT AT MASS MEETING

Cayou's Talk On College Spirit Wins Students of Rival School.

When Coach Frank Cayou of the Washington University football team closed his speech before the mass meeting of University of Missouri students in the auditorium last night, there was prolonged and hearty applause and nine lusty yells for the speaker, all of which signified the passing of the spirit of distrust and bickering in western intercollegiate athletics and the substitution thereof of a clean, sportsmanlike rivalry.

Coach Cayou complimented the Missourians on their spirit and their loyalty to the football team. Incidentally, he gave a little lecture on college spirit, quietly and without any attempt at oratorical effect, that completely won the audience.

The Right College Spirit.

"Men have the right sort of college spirit," he said in conclusion, "when they forget personalities and go out on the gridiron to fight for their college. Whether my team wins or loses, that's the sort of fighting spirit that I like to see on the football field."

Coach Cayou mildly accused some of the previous speakers of indulging in a little "hot air" about the football game. He said it was his first experience in the "show-me" state and he hoped the Missouri team wouldn't "show him too awful much."

The auditorium was packed and many were standing when the meeting was called to order by Raymond Lee, chairman. Prof. L. M. Defoe in a brief address formally presented to the Tigers the blankets purchased for them by the students of the Engineering Department. He referred to the Engineers as the students who do things. Department rivalry was forgotten in the applause that followed his speech.

Captain Miller Talks.

Captain E. L. Miller of the football team accepted the blankets for the Tigers, thanking the Engineers for the gift. Coach Monilaw spoke on behalf of the athletic department and complimented the Engineers for "backing up" the team. He praised the fighting spirit shown by the team at Des Moines and predicted victory over Washington. His only fear, he said, was that some of the men might be injured and thus kept out of the game with Kansas. Nine yells were given for the coach, O. D. Chrisman leading the yelling.

"Arkansas" Hunt made a characteristic speech expressing the loyalty of the student body for the team. H. K. ("General") Smith, a graduate of the Engineering Department, now of St. Louis, said he wouldn't dare go back to St. Louis if the Tigers lost. "Ozark"

BLEACHERS WENT WILD WHEN NEE MADE GREAT RUN

Overwhelming Victory Set the Staid Professors in Frenzy of Joy.

At 2:35 p. m., Washington marched slowly from the "gym" to the field. The men were clad in blankets which looked as if they might have been taken from the Athens Hotel.

A few minutes later, The Tigers, clad in the glorious old gold and black blankets, presented to them last night at the mass meeting, trotted briskly from the "gym" to the field. They were greeted with "twenty-seven Mizzou's."

The sun, as if it had been awaiting their arrival on the field, burst forth from behind the clouds and greeted them with a flood of light.

After exactly six minutes of play, the ball was pushed to the one-foot line. Constant fumbles on the part of the Tigers kept the hopes of the crowd going up and down like the needle on a penny-weighting machine. In five minutes more, the ball went over for a touchdown and the crowd went mad with joy.

The game was the prettiest exhibition of open football ever seen on Rollins field. It resembled a track meet more than a football game.

When Wilder, feeling cold, sprinted across Washington's goal for a touchdown, it was more than the crowd could stand, and it lost what sense it had left. Staid old "profs" waved their canes frantically and gave their vocal organs an unexpected shock. The sun, in celebration of the victory, shone at its brightest.

The air was just cool enough to put spice into the Tigers' playing. Missouri's backfield proved to be faster and ran away from the "Pikeway Boys."

SNOW SWEEPED FROM FIELD

A squad of negroes was set to work early this morning by Coach Monilaw to sweep an inch-thick blanket of snow from the gridiron on Rollins Field.

Armed with brooms, the men set systematically to work, and soon the chalked yard-lines began to appear. The sod is frozen, and as the sun was veiled during the morning it was not materially softened. The twenty-two men who trotted onto the field this afternoon stamped on it with grimaces of disgust, realizing that a fall on it meant a hard fall.

Washington "rooters" had a big flag with their University colors, myrtle and maroon, in the south bleachers. The day was ideal for football. Just before time was called the sun broke through the clouds and warmed the shivering crowd. The field was hard and fast, all the snow having been swept off.

SIDELINE NOTES AS GAME WENT ON

E. V. Parrish is "covering" the game for the St. Louis Republic. Gilchrist was on the field in street clothes. The "rooters" gave him a "long I."

The band marched around the cinder path between halves playing "Old Missouri."

"Only a blizzard could keep me away from the game," said President Hill this morning.

The crowd stood with bared heads as the band played "Old Missouri," just after the Tigers came on the field.

"Many old 'grads' were in the crowd that saw the game. William F. Switzer drove up in his automobile from St. Louis.

Missouri overwhelmed Washington University on Rollins field this afternoon, playing football so classy that it made the St. Louis team look like eleven high school boys. The score, when the Tigers quit romping around the Washington ends, plunging through the Washington line, and "forward passing" despite Washington attempts at interference, was 40 to 0.

Missouri's advantage in weight alone does not account for this victory. The team for the first time this season played its best, and every Tiger became a 'Varsity star. Determined to defeat the ancient enemy, the Tigers went in to make football history, and, while the bleachers yelled itself hoarse with joy.

Nee made probably the most brilliant individual play of the game, when he ran 60 yards for a touch-down, shaking off several Washington tacklers. "Tubby" Graves, left tackle, returned to 1907 form, when he was considered one of the classiest gridiron stars in the West, and Driver, Wilder, and Deatherage played like veterans.

Black made several fine line gains, but he was not up to the form expected of him, being overshadowed by the fighting spirit, teamwork and splendid individual work by the others of the team.

Coach Cayou's men, outweighed and outclassed, played a spirited and plucky game against invincible odds, and won the sympathy even of the most enthusiastic Tiger "rooters."

Washington wins the toss, and chose to defend the west goal, with the wind at their backs. Black kicked off 25 yards; Missouri gets the ball on Washington's 25-yard line. Deatherage fumbled. Black failed to kick a field goal from Washington's 45-yard line. Washington kicked out to center. A forward pass from Graves to Driver nets 25 yards. Wilder carried the ball 25 yards around end. Driver took the ball over for a touch-down, but Missouri was penalized 15 yards for holding. Nee went 10 yards around end. Missouri was held for downs on Washington's 5-yard line. Rodenberg kicked for Washington to Deatherage. Black again failed to kick field goal. Rodenberg kicked out to the center of the field and it is Missouri's ball. Nee went around end for a gain of 15 yards.

Alexander Makes Good Run.

Bouton is forced to kick, and the ball goes to the Tigers on their 10-yard line. Graves is thrown for a loss of 4 yards. Alexander runs 30 yards around end on a fake punt. Nee goes around end for a gain of 5 yards. The Tigers are held for downs on their 40-yard line. Bouton kicks to Deatherage, who returns 5 yards from the 1-yard line. Alexander kicks 36 yards, and Graves recovers the ball. Alexander kicks. Ristine recovers the ball on 30-yard line; Graves gains 11 yards. Nee kicks out 35 yards to Rodenberg, who returns the ball to the Tigers' 45-yard line. Goldsmith makes a quarter back on-side kick, and Deatherage recovers the ball on the 25-yard line.
